Abstract:

Sustainable Development was first used in 1987. In simple terms, sustainable development is development that seeks to meet today's needs with a view to meeting the needs of future generations. Just as sustainable development is about saving the future of the next generation, spreading values among the youth of any nation is tantamount to saving the future of society. Living in a society, a person gets his experiences from the members of his mental, biological and cultural social environment, family members and other social groups. Human values reflect the quality of a society, organization, or family. While living in a society, a human being begins to learn the lessons of values from his family and members of the society through the process of socialization itself and reads it with the help of educational institutions with life experiences. Thus, in today's time, these social institutions, family, religion and educational institutions have a very important responsibility to carry out their basic functions well. This paper we discussed the importance of education, enable students to adhere to values and discuss the role of parents, teachers and society in inculcating social values in students.

Introduction:

Sustainable Development was first used in 1987. In simple terms, sustainable development is development that seeks to meet today's needs with a view to meeting the needs of future generations. Just as sustainable development is about saving the future of the next generation, spreading values among the youth of any nation is tantamount to saving the future of society. Living in a society, a person gets his experiences from the members of his mental, biological and cultural social environment, family members and other social groups. Human values reflect the quality of a society, organization, or family. While living in a society, a human being begins to learn the lessons of values from his family and members of the society through the process of socialization itself and reads it with the help of educational institutions with life experiences. Thus, in today's time, these social institutions, family, religion and educational institutions have a very important responsibility to carry out their basic functions well. In other words, these institutions must be fully self-sustaining. Especially these educational institutions which are considered as the main means of propagating values. This paper will highlight the importance of education, enable students to adhere to values and discuss the role of parents, teachers and society in inculcating social values in students.

Objectives of the study:

- Learn about social values in students.
- To know the role of important institutions of the society in spreading social values.

Research Methodology:

This current study relies on secondary data. Contains content from books, magazines, newspapers and websites.

Social Values:

Living in a society, a person gets his experiences from the members of his mental, biological and cultural social environment, family members and other social groups. Values are never found externally but are inculcated internally. Educational institutions are considered important pillars of today's civilized society. The whole structure of any family, society and nation depends on this pillar. The stronger these pillars are, the more the family, society and nation will continue to function in a prosperous and orderly manner. If there is any harm in these pillars then it will not take long for the family, society and the nation to disintegrate. We must always remember that values are not the same as motor training that once mastered in life one has to live for a lifetime. Values are not an art, it is not just a field of knowledge, it is a lifelong understanding and behaviour.

Dr. According to Radhakamal Mukherjee in his book, the characteristics of social values: -

1. With the social structure of values in which the values of the ideal are accepted, human behaviour is considered to be related to the values.
2. Prices are generated as a result of social interaction.
3. Prices are born out of environmental characteristics and have a regional basis.
4. Values play an important role in shaping the personality of individuals. Which is studied on biological, mental and spiritual basis.
5. Failure to follow the values in the society leads to many social problems which hinder the progress of the individual, the society, the family and the nation.
6. Because of the conflict over prices, one chooses the right prices based on one's education, experience and ideals. (Fast food and balanced diet)
7. Values are related to the human mind because only one person is the creator of them.
8. Prices are transmitted from generation to generation.

We will discuss the role of teachers and society in the propagation of social values.

Role of Parents:

The child is always treated like a clean slate on which the parents can write whatever they want. Children always imitate their surroundings, especially their parents, family members, friends, teachers and the media. Parents are the primary role models in the beginning of a child's life. Therefore, parents should always listen carefully to their children and guide them well. Parents' interactions with other members, with neighbours, with relatives provide the right environment for children, as children always imitate their parents.

Expansion of values in children is possible only if children are provided with a learning environment. The family's biggest and foremost responsibility is to provide a learning environment for its members, especially children. The child learns the first lessons of his life in the family itself, such as truthfulness, cleanliness, tolerance, kindness, respect for others, honesty, respect and obedience. In every society children are like a bank account in which we can deposit money in them from time to time and later we can withdraw them along with interest, the values are the same as in this bank account. If the right values are taught then when they grow up they can become a true active member of the society. In other words, if parents teach their children love, honesty, respect, dignity, kindness, etc., then the children also pay the return price by respecting their honour if the parents are the ones who nurture the right values in them. If not, they will ruin the future of their children by themselves.

It is the parents who briefly tell their children about the adoration and blessings of God that God always helps them or blesses those who act according to their principles and responsibilities. In the same way great warriors, Gurus, saints tell stories based on great educational logic only then will they be able to inculcate positive values in them. At the same time parents' own behaviour, attitudes, beliefs, thinking based on logic, proper use of time and adherence to values are the true development of their own children and parents themselves become an example. Values give a person a position in society as a good person. Ordinary people expect honesty in children. Because honesty is considered to be the highest quality of a person's personality. Lack of honesty is one of the reasons why a child fails to make good friends, has a secure career and a happy married life. That is why the main task of every parent is to develop the qualities of honesty in their children and to make sure that the children are good. Or is it bad? The only way to be honest is to follow the truth. Parents should spend as much time with their children as possible, especially choosing the evening time as "Family Time." Including some play, TV. Shows, movies, etc. should be enjoyed together. Similarly, whenever a TV While watching shows, movies, etc. together, if there is any use of objectionable language, scenes, behaviour and language in them, they should talk to their children about the discussion and its bad consequences etc. That is why all this is objectionable.

Role of Teachers:

Only a teacher who has a good set of values can inculcate good values in his students. Only an experienced and knowledgeable teacher can read the faces of his students. The main task of the teacher is to inculcate human values in the students and to present them as a good human being. The student not only imitates his teacher from the beginning but is immersed in the way he behaves and values. That is why teachers are always called role models for their students. It is therefore imperative for the teachers to inculcate in their students the high and positive aspects of the curriculum as well as the values related to daily behaviour and current subjects so that the students can be a direct friend to all of them. Can achieve in a crowded environment. In the same way, ethical values are never enforced, but in general it is necessary to create an environment for children in whom the child himself can differentiate between right and wrong.

Role of Society:

To meet the basic needs of a human being (bread, cloth and house) one has to live in a society. Because a human being can never fulfil these basic needs by being isolated from society, that is, by himself. He is forced to live in the society. Individuals fulfil their needs by living in society. Without society, a person has no importance and dignity of his own. Society is the real means of understanding values, rules and one's duties and responsibilities. In human society itself, the most important needs of the individual society, cooperation and mutual cooperation are also considered to be a great feature. Without them a person's life will be useless and he will not be able to progress. Values not only teach us to live and walk in the society but also teach us about our family values, national values, occupational values etc. The values of truth, faith and justice are inculcated in children. Culture teaches us a lesson of peace, belongingness and tolerance and the family plays an important role in fulfilling our responsibilities to others. Adult interaction, social problems or events, rational analysis, fulfilment of responsibilities towards nationality is considered an essential function of society.

In today's modern society, parents and society should not discriminate against children on the basis of gender in any way and they should treat both boys and girls equally in domestic responsibilities.

Suggestions: - (Finally we will discuss about some tips for spreading social values.)

1. Parents should spend more time with their children than with the money race. One meal a day should be collected. Children should be given a good message by telling a story every day.
2. Professors in the college should be an ideal model for the students so that the students can achieve their objectives by imitating them.
3. The teacher should create an environment for the students in which they can always openly share their thoughts and problems with them.
4. The college should organize various activities from time to time which should include

- seminars, workshops, etc. So that social values can be taught to the students.
5. College students should also be prepared to solve the problems of their daily lives. For which leadership programs can also be arranged.
  6. Teachers should share classroom problems etc. with each other.
  7. Sports should be organized in the college so that the values like mutual cooperation, competition, harmony, sehaj can be spread among the students.
  8. It is very important to share the importance of National Day and Tith festivals.
  9. Students should be encouraged to read daily newspapers and books.
  10. Teachers must teach ethics in addition to their curriculum.
  11. Students should be involved in organizing various meetings in the college such as Natural Club, Literacy Club, Social Service Club, Blood Donation Club etc.
  12. Students should be aware of the problems that come up and prepare them to be always ready to solve them.
  13. Students should always be made aware of themselves and society so that they can avoid anti-social activities.
  14. It is important not only to make students aware of social problems but also how to get rid of them and prepare others to be aware of them.
  15. To make the students aware of the main objectives of their life and to teach them to achieve those objectives according to the social values.
